Administrative/Biographical history:

The Law Society was founded in London in 1825 as the Society of Attorneys, Solicitors, Proctors and others not being barristers, having been previously established in 1823 as The London Law Institution. It acquired its first Royal Charter in 1831 and a further charter in 1845 established it as an independent professional organisation. The Society has delivered legal education in England since 1835, and has set examinations since 1836. It also has a regulatory and representational role for the profession.

For a detailed description of the history of the Law Society, see: Kirk, Harry, Portrait of a profession: a history of the solicitors' profession 1100 to the present day. Oyez, 1976 and Sugarman, David, A Brief history of the Law Society, Law Society, 1994.
